Sample Questions

House and redistricting

1. Will the wave of mid-decade redistricting leave Republicans with a net advantage in the House in November?
2. Does California's redistricting response show that Democrats can match Republican gerrymandering?
3. Will the outcome of the redistricting fights in Missouri, New York, Maryland, and Mississippi affect control of the House?
4. What do the Cook Political Report's ratings, with Republicans holding 16 of 21 toss-up seats, suggest about the House majority?

Senate

5. Can Susan Collins win a sixth term in Maine despite the Democratic base rallying behind Troy Jackson?
6. Will Abdul El-Sayed's DSA-backed candidacy help or hurt Democrats in the Michigan Senate race?
7. To what extent will Ken Paxton's legal and personal controversies cost Republicans the Texas Senate seat?
8. Is James Talarico's polite demeanor the right strategy for a Democrat in Texas?
9. Will Mary Peltola's ranked-choice race in Alaska be decided by the crowded Republican-leaning field?
10. Can Adam Hamilton's moderate positioning make Kansas the surprise upset of the Senate map?
11. Does Sherrod Brown's strong polling in Ohio mean Democrats can still compete in a state that has trended Republican?
12. Will Senate control come down to Maine and Michigan rather than the traditionally red states?

Governors

13. Is Amy Acton's lead over Vivek Ramaswamy in Ohio evidence of a backlash against celebrity political outsiders?
14. Can Cindy Holscher's focus on cost of living and education keep Democrats competitive in the Kansas governor's race?

15. What does David Crowley's narrow primary win over Francesca Hong suggest about the strength of the progressive wing in Wisconsin's governor's race?